ENHANCING EFFECTIVENESS AND EFFICIENCY THROUGH CERTIFICATION TO ISO STANDARDS

A standard is a document (information and its supporting medium) containing a set of requirements against which an organization's products / services can be benchmarked. International standards are developed by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) headquartered in Geneva Switzerland, through its technical committee.

ISO standards are tools that can be used by an organization to benchmark its products and services for compliance to requirements. The international standards, being generic, are applicable to any organization across all sectors of the economy.

Implementation of any international (ISO) standard is voluntary and therefore should be a strategic decision by the top management of the organization. In Kenya the government has made this strategic decision on behalf of its agencies.

An organization prides itself as being certified /registered to an international (ISO) standard when its processes and operations are aligned to the requirements of the respective standard and a certifying body / registrar confirms this conformity to the specific requirements.

When properly implemented, the international standards lead organizations to realize numerous benefits including;

- Operational efficiency
- Employee Accountability
- Enhanced customer satisfaction

An organization has to be strategically placed to wither the increased competition globally. One of the ways of achieving a competitive edge is by having a management system that assures effectiveness and efficiency in its operation.

The ISO certified firms' directory seeks to link up the organizations in Eastern Africa, (Burundi, Comoros, Djibouti, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Madagascar, Malawi, Mauritius, Mozambique, Rwanda, Seychelles, Somalia, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe) that have their management systems certified to international standards.

The directory, a very useful platform for networking and exchange of ideas, will be circulated to all listed organizations and the public.

We invite you to take this opportunity to advertise your products and services in this premier Publication.
